Tracing the Roots of Running Hand

The Running Hand style originated during the Eastern Han Dynasty (25-220 CE) as a harmonious blend of the formal script, Li Shu, and the cursive script, Cao Shu. Combining the legibility of Li Shu with the expressiveness of Cao Shu, Running Hand became a versatile and widely used script for both official documents and personal correspondence.

Over the centuries, Running Hand evolved into a sophisticated art form, with countless variations and interpretations emerging. Chinese Calligraphy Arts Running Hand Vol 197 traces the historical development of this style, providing insights into its origins, evolution, and cultural impact.
