The Court held that the classification violated the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment, establishing the principle that gender-based discrimination is unconstitutional.

2. Frontiero v. Richardson (1973)

The Court held that the law violated the Fifth Amendment's Due Process Clause, recognizing that women are entitled to equal protection under the law.

3. United States v. Virginia (1996)

In one of her most influential cases, Justice Ginsburg penned the Court's opinion, declaring the Virginia Military Institute's (VMI) male-only admissions policy unconstitutional. The Court held that the policy violated the Equal Protection Clause, rejecting VMI's argument that single-sex education provided unique benefits to men.

4. City of Boerne v. Flores (1997)

In this case, Justice Ginsburg authored a concurring opinion, articulating the strict scrutiny standard under which the government's interference with religious practices must be evaluated. This standard has been instrumental in safeguarding religious freedom in subsequent cases.

5. Ledbetter v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. (2007)

In a dissenting opinion, Justice Ginsburg forcefully argued that the Court's narrow interpretation of the Equal Pay Act allowed gender-based wage discrimination to continue unchecked.
